New Delaware program aimed at managing pain

By Peter MacArthur

8+1 Share

A new initiative being introduced in Delaware with the goal of managing the chronic pain of patients.

Project ECHO matches specialists with primary care providers in an effort to come up with the best pain management plan.

State health officials say many primary care doctors haven't traditionally received training in chronic pain management.

It's estimated that between 30 and 50 percent of patients may deal with chronic pain at some time in their lives.
